

nature.com

17 September 2015

Getty

Global links between air pollution and premature mortality

Globally, outdoor air pollution leads to over 3 million premature deaths per year, predominantly in Asia, suggests a study published in Nature.

Latest news

- ▶ Dramatic rise seen in antibiotic use
- ▶ Welfare breach prompts Nature to update policy on publishing animal experiments
- ▶ Nanoparticles disguised as blood-cell fragments slip past body's immune defence

▶ More news from Nature

Nature journal

▶ Contents 17 Sept 15
▶ Podcasts ▶ Videos

Inside nature.com

Publications A-Z
▶ browse the nature.com publications index

Nature.com regions
▶ Asia-Pacific
▶ Nature India
▶ Nature Middle East
see more ▶

naturejobs.com
▶ Post a Science job now!

Latest research

- ▶ The contribution of outdoor air pollution sources to premature mortality on a global scale Nature
- ▶ Zebrafish as tools for drug discovery Nature Reviews Drug Discovery
- ▶ Understanding and predicting suicidality using a combined genomic and clinical risk assessment approach FREE Molecular Psychiatry

Special Feature

New in 2016: Nature Microbiology

Launching in January 2016, Nature Microbiology will cover all aspects of microorganisms be it their evolution, physiology and cell biology, their interactions with each other, with a host, with an environment, or their societal significance.

Submit your next research paper.

NPG in the news

13 August 2015

Explore nature.com

Introducing Nature Index

Nature Outlooks

Blogs - from nature.com

- ▶ Featured blog
A View from the Bridge: Nature's Books and Arts blog
- ▶ Featured Posts
Hopes for the Year Ahead - A blog post from Naturejobs
Citizen Science: In the Shadows of Volcán Tungurahua - A Soapbox Science blog

Browse subjects

Life Sciences
Genetics, Neuroscience, Cancer...

Open Innovation
▶ Solve innovation challenges

Launchpad
▶ Mobile
▶ Projects
see more ▶

Multimedia
▶ Nature Videos
▶ Nature Podcast
▶ More podcasts
▶ Webcasts

Society partners
▶ International society publishing partnerships
▶ Nature Partner Journals

Gateways and Databases
▶ Protocol Exchange
▶ Open Research @ NPG